Foreword

THE NEWTONIAN, by its nature and history, has become one of the cherished traditions of our school. In the name Newton there is much meaning for us who here have studied and played together. It represents a great deal in material gain and also a great deal that we cannot now measure — influence toward the seeing and the doing of the lowly task and inspiration toward catching a vision of deeds beyond and above mere books. —Our one aim, therefore, in producing this fifteenth volume has been to carry on the Newtonian tradition in a manner worthy of the Newton High School.

Senate Investigation—Number 1924

AN intense and “Coolidge-like” silence reigned in the senate chamber at Washington. The chairman of the senate investigating committee, appointed by the President to examine the classes of Newton High School, rose. In his hands trembling with age, there were documents old, new, and middle-aged. “Mr. President,” he announced, “This commission has given many years to the investigation of the history of all classes of Newton High School in an attempt to decide upon the best class of that school. We have examined all records of previous years and conferred with H. G. Wells on all that are to come. This committee, Mr. President, is absolutely, positively, and unanimously agreed on the best class of the school.”

There the chairman slapped his knee so that the President and Senate were obliged to wink in an assenting chorus.

“But, Mr. President, in order that you also may be absolutely, positively, and unanimously in accord with us, we have here a slight summary of the worthy deeds of this extraordinary class.

“In the one hundred and forty-fourth year of the independence of the United States, there assembled at Newton High School from varied situations in the surroundings, sundry and strange personages. They were characterized by blissful ignorance, long pigtailed, short trousers, and freckles. But the upper classmen, as those worthy creatures were called, who had arrived in Newton before our little heroes, were most anxious in regard to the welfare of these little ones; in fact, so much so that many of the Freshmen, for so they were named, expended many hours searching for the head of the Yiddish Department and other imaginary quantities. Even the teachers remarked that the Freshmen of that year had the sweetest little faces they had viewed for some time.

Newton High School

“In spite of the slight deformities which we have mentioned, this class collected most of themselves before the expiration of the year and elected the following officials: Robert Brown, President; Ruth Pigeon, Vice-President; Jean Thompson, Secretary; and Robert Adams, Treasurer.

“The remainder of this year was passed in correcting an inward turn of the toes and in cultivating a passionate acquaintance with the Latin language.

“Next September, this brilliant class returned double quick to corridors of their now beloved school. During the summer they had become so wise that no title but ‘wise fools’ could adequately describe them. Before long they displayed great interest in their government and elected to direct them into paths of glory: Robert Brown, President; Lucy Allen, Vice-President; Jean Thompson, Secretary; and Robert Adams, Treasurer.

“The class this year entered athletics with great glee. But it is needless to record, perhaps, that here their prowess was only equalled by the glorious victories which they won over Caesar’s Gallic Wars. As the year progressed the class seriously and conscientiously undertook the training of their Freshmen friends, which they (the class, not the Freshmen) found most diverting.

“But in that year deep sorrow entered the school. The ruler over all its classes passed quietly away. They mourned him as a teacher of inspiring vision, as a friend, and as a gentleman. Throughout his administration there was no one who had not felt the lofty sincerity and kindness which distinguished him as a principal and a man.

“According to all records which are at present in existence,” continued the chairman, “there is every reason to believe that most of this illustrious class returned the following September. But they had changed; all ‘jest and youthful jollity’ had disappeared from their souls, for they were Juniors.

“At this time there entered into the life of the school, a new principal, Mr. Francis L. Bacon. From many miles to the south, indeed, from the wilds of Connecticut itself, he had journeyed to assist this class in its glorious progress. He soon discovered that, in the school, he had no more loyal supporters and friends than the members of this same body.

“The elections of that year raised the following to eminence: President, Tudor Bowen; Vice-President, Lucy Allen; Secretary, Rosemary Park; Treasurer, Richard Vaughn.

“During the year several of the class acted as Junior reporters for the ‘Newtonite’, that world-famed publication, and gained distinction on the football, hockey, and baseball teams of the school, not to mention swimming and outdoor track. In their scholastic activities their brilliance was also remarkable as any of the faculty will testify. They ended their career as Juniors by a farewell reception to their Senior friends, who were leaving for the wide, wide world.

“In the one hundred and forty-eighth year of the independence of the United States, this class blossomed into full glory. At that time a company called Sub-Seniors joined its forces. Thus united the power and influence of the class was so increased that its members became nothing less than the private deities of Newton High School. Indeed, there was no wisdom loving sophomore or verdant freshman who did not find his ideal among them. As their leaders for this most prosperous period, they elected: Howard Whitmore, President; Margaret Williams, Vice-President; Rosemary Park, Secretary; Edwin Dewing, Treasurer.

“Coach Dickinson produced from their midst creditable football and baseball teams, while, Doctor Martin and several members of the Senior Class with some assistance from the lower classes, easily carried off the world championship for scholastic hockey. The girls of the class were also noted for their athletic prowess, and, in the annual Gym Meet, utterly defeated all opponents, to their own great joy and satisfaction.

“‘The Newtonite,’ with John Fleming as editor, continued its career under the guidance of the Senior Class, nobly aided by Don Alceste and his friends, Bert the Bull and Penwype. (These last having charge of all society notes and the weekly supply of scandal.)

Newton High School

“On the last day of February and first of March came the dramatic production of the class, ‘The White Blossom’ by Helen Bonser. Crowds from all the country gathered to hear and see Virginia White, their dramatic star and a large cast of eminent artists.

“After this outburst of merriment, came a period of great and concentrated study for something called College Boards. Thus engaged the class continued peacefully until one day in June, when, having assembled, each of their illustrious members was presented with a carefully rolled, and printed emblem, which the authorities have named diploma. This commission has been unable to discover what explosive material was included by the authorities in these rolls, but of a sudden, without sign or warning this glorious class was blown to the four corners of the earth and none were left behind. So they disappeared and we can find no trace of their ever uniting again. The loss to the school by the graduation of this class was indeed irreparable. But the committee must unite with those who remain in sincere regret that Newton High in the same year, was forced to lose an instructor who had for so long a time made his benign influence felt. Mr. Davis came to Newton forty-three years ago; he gave the finest years of his life to the guidance of the young people of the City of Newton. It is the privilege of this committee to include in its report some mention of the great respect, honor, and love which all those young people have always felt and will always feel for Mr. Davis, whose resignation is an occurrence of such importance to the school,” ended the commissioner.

From the galleries and floor of the senate there broke a thunder of applause as tribute to the mighty deeds of the class. Slowly and deliberately the President rose and demanded the name of the class whose history was so remarkable. Then the following eloquent syllables broke from the chairman’s lips: “The class whose extraordinary deeds I have related, whose ability and prowess ranks above all others, and whose name thus goes down to history, is no other, gentlemen, than the Class of Newton Classical High School, 1924.”

A Fishy History

SMALL minnows they were, just large enough to swim. Their journey downward they were starting. No longer could they remain above in the streams of the mountain heights. The call of "new waters" penetrated their every fin. A's, B's, D's, X's, and many other devil fish tried to devour the innocents without avail. Arithmetic monsters and reading and writing fish gave them battle. Then after eight years of struggling a new era dawned.

Early in September 1920 they reached the source. Freshman, of the great Newton river. Minnows from the Mason brook, minnows from the Pierce stream, minnows from the Burr rivulet, minnows from the Bigelow rill—all assembled together in the "new waters," anticipating "fresh" adventures, with quivering tails. Strange to say their every scale was green; but this did not hinder them. Leaders they wanted. The greenest they chose. Trout Robert Brown was their pick for head fish, with Pickerel Ruth Pigeon for assistant. Perch Jean Thompson was allotted to nibble the reed, while Bass Robert Adams was appointed to guard the sacred angleworms. They named themselves Class of 1924. Many times were they lost in the great depths of the Newton river, only to be shown the true course by the big and kind patrolfish. Yes there were many patrolfish. Mr. Adams, they learned was the name of the one at the head. No peace did his assistants give them. Algebra, Latin, and "what not" were crammed into their "fishy" brains. If they did not learn, they were obliged to remain under the "make-up" rock for an hour or two. Not the kind of "make-up" rocks that the lady fish use to polish their snouts and fins. No, under these rocks it was very gloomy, with slippery eels in full charge. Their troubles did not stop here. Other fish, just a little larger and a little less green pestered them continually. But gradually these new adventurers became accustomed to the surroundings. Absorbed in the many diversions such as fin-poking (football), bubbleblowing (baseball), candalwiggling (track), pebble-sliding (hockey), and flycatching (basketball), the time flew so swiftly that June arrived unexpectedly. Not until they abruptly reached a mighty fall, and were cruelly hurled into the air by the rushing water, did they realize (most of them) that never again would they dwell in the source, Freshman.

September saw them in the new Sophomore part of the stream. Leaders were chosen again. Trout Brown kept his position at the head, having as his new assistant Salmon Lucy Allen. Perch Thompson continued to nibble the reed, with Bass Adams still guarding the sacred angleworms. Now the journey began to be harder. Big geometry rapids almost barred the way, while horned

Newton High School

Caesar toads threatened their very lives. But they had grown larger and stronger and overcame the every hardship. Many of them engaged in finpoking and bubbleblowing feats with other fish from other "waters" and turned out victorious. Much shorter, but harder, seemed this Sophomore section of the stream. Only too soon, however, did they find themselves sailing through the air into Junior waters.

Muskalonge Tudor Bowen headed the class now with Salmon Lucy Allen to assist him. Trout Rosemary Park took to nibbling the reed, and Burbot Richard Vaughn was keeper of the sacred angleworms. The new section was almost clogged up with chemistry weeds and Cicero rocks, but their bony fins and husky backs (for they had grown very husky at this stage) brought most of the 1924's safely across the danger. New head patrolfish Bacon succeeded Mr. Adams, who had, much to the sorrow of the fish, passed away to the Mystery waters. Wonders were accomplished on the athletic "beds" this season. Reeds called the NEWTONITE were distributed every week with the fish news nibbled on them. Many other great achievements brought the Junior section to an end. Over the third fall they went, this time to divide into two parts. One took a new and longer course, Sub-Senior, while the other continued on the straight, short bed.

Almost full-sized fish these minnows were now. Those that took the Sub-Senior course changed their name and called themselves Class of 1925. Patrolfish Bacon advised that the class go back and follow the leaders of the "younger" fish in the Junior course, but the Class of 1925 squirmed and splashed and obtained the right to choose their own. New leaders were elected. Bass Raymond Rockwood became head fish now, with Perch Alice Potter as his assistant. Later Perch Potter moved to another river and Pickerel Nancy Kimball took her place. Salmon Lucy Allen was named nibbler of the reed, while Sunfish James Hoyt was appointed to watch the sacred angleworms. Many fish renowned for their mighty deeds in athletics belonged to this class. Bass Adams was elected chief of the Newton River varsity finpoking team, while many others from the class played on the same. The Newton River pebble-sliding team was also headed by a fish from the Sub-Senior course, Dogfish Roland O'Donnell. He led it on to many victories, defeating the teams from every river near by and also that of a river situated in a distant valley called Canada. A great fintwitcher (dance), the Kriss Kringle Kaper, was also conducted by this thrifty class. Skillful were they all at tackling the history dummies and at riding misplaced sea horses through the Latin quick sands.

On the brink of the last roaring fall we must leave our scaly friends. One last adventure in the Senior section they anticipate before the great river, Newton, carries them into its delta and into the broad college ocean, never to return.

BY MISS CELANEOS, FISH EXPERT.

History of '25

In the Fall of nineteen twenty-one,
With a predestination to thrive,
Although with a somewhat verdant look,
Hailed the class of '25.

A year of contest then ensued,
Of which I may record,
As Freshman, we won the Gym meet,
And deserved a great reward.

Later, this brilliant Freshman class
Assembled in the hall,
To elect a group of officers—
Of whom I may recall:

For President—Holmes Whitmore;
Vice-President—Katharine Bonner;
Barbara Angier as Secretary;
And Carleton McCullough, last honor.

Through the second year we prospered,
With the usual Sophomore “air;”
Meeting a menu quite hard to digest—
The Geometry—Caesar fare.

But we, the illustrious, ever,
Waded this earnest course,
With a similar consistency,
Led by the same Freshman force.

And then we arrived at the Junior stage—
Almost the top of the ladder,
With college entrance exams just ahead,
A fact that made us but the sadder.

Newton High School

This year was a topping success, though,
As is known full well to our readers
And we counceiled again to find
Whom we should have for our Junior class leaders.

President—Henry Johnson;
Vice-President—Helen Andrews;
Secretary—Barbara Angier;
Carleton McCullough in charge of dues.

We've done fairly well in athletics,
Our hockey, baseball, and track—
Not to mention our other bright features,
Such as Newtonite, dances, and knack.

And now, with one year before us,
We've determined to do our best,
And graduate full-fledged Seniors—
Here's hoping we'll stand the test.

History Of De Injun Band

By the shady trail called Walnut,
By the winding Laundry Brook,
Stands the famous Newton High School,
Stands the gloomy, ancient High School.
Far within dwell many Injuns,
Dwell the wild and painted Injuns,
Dwell the four most mighty tribes.
Stern above them reign the chieftains,
Reign the wise and knowing chieftains,
Reign the chiefs of iron rule.

Here the heap Big-Chief-Ben-Adams
Rules the second Injun tribe,
Rules it with the help of others,
Squaws and bucks both young and strong.
Next the worthy Big-Chief-Adams
Stands a comely, Injun maiden,
Daughter of the Sun, Miss-Davis,
Pale-face squaw, Miss Bette-Davis.

By her side a stately maiden,
Miss Faith-Wing, the Injuns call her,
Wields with grace a skillful pencil,
Telling all the tribal doings.
Last in power, yet not the weakest
Stands the noble buck, John-Holt,
Famous for his skill in numbers,
Big-Chief-Holt, the wide known wonder.

Dark behind the Newton High School
Squats an ugly, black tepee;
Here the four great tribes of Injuns
Daily show their craft and might.
Ranking well with older warriors
Is the youthful, second tribe;
Many things this band has mastered

Newton High School

Through long moons of tireless labor,
So, when in the final contest,
Injun maidens strove to win
For their tribes the shining trophy,
Emblem of their tribal strength,
Though the oldest band was victor,
Still the second held its own,
And was proud to claim the honor
Of the next to boldest nation.
Not only supple maidens
Brought high fame unto this tribe;
Lithe, young braves with brawny sinews
Proved their worth as valiant warriors.

So each year this tribe increases
Both in wisdom and in strength
Till with truly magic swiftness
Several fleeting summers hence,
It shall vanish from the wigwam,
From the aged, yellow wigwam
Which for years has been its home,
And another band of Injuns
Wand'ring through the hunting-grounds,
Finding traces of the passing
Of an ancient "Second Tribe,"
Follows proudly in the footsteps
Of the band of Twenty-Six.

A Beginning To Be Proud Of

On September 10, 1923 amidst a rumbling of earthquakes and an eclipse of the sun we entered Newton High School! It surely was a rumble. Dazed and amazed we innocents traversed the maze of corridors. Ah! How we blessed the "Orange Book" with its helpful map and information.

Soon we settled down to study hard and diligently (didn't know any better) but suddenly we awakened November 20 and rushed forth to see an enormous, flying cigar, called the "Shenandoah." This shining spectacle was so enthralling we had oral themes (detested things) on it for weeks.

Track! Don't forget our heroes, Warren, Switzler, Green and, last but not least, Thornquist. Tiny but plucky! What fun to see "Hammy" get going so fast he'd trip over his own feet, fall, let others tumble over him, then, undaunted, jump up and finish strong. "Edgie" would run bravely up to the high jump when it was most as high as himself. Did he clear it? Sure!

Days grew older till at last hockey players felt real ice under their skates. What a thrill to see "little Junie Stubbs" go skating along with the puck safely guarded by his stick, then quickly and deftly shoot a goal, and almost before our cheers had subsided for this, "Frankie" Spain would repeat the feat. Think that these two helped to win the International Championship for Newton!

Although many enjoy and prefer the cold air and winter sports some don't. "Pompy" Foster belongs to the latter class. He's our swimmer! He swam the relay well but he shone in the 40 yard dash, at least the water did as he went splashing through it.

Meanwhile the girls weren't idle. Goodness no! Their tongues never are anyway, but early in the fall at "Mac's" command a crowd appeared one sunny afternoon at Cabot Park to try for the field hockey team. Finally Miss Flanders was able to pick a good team which was successfully led by Virginia Spurrier till at last they triumphed over the Junior High.

Later as the crown of victory was slightly tarnished we had to brighten it with a basketball victory (24-10) over the same victims. Marion Frost was our captain on this field and a good one, too.

However here we were with no class leaders; so on March 6, 1924 we held our first class meeting. The following efficient students were elected to their respective offices: President, Edgar Warren; Vice-President, Alfred Hartridge; Secretary, Virginia Spurrier; Treasurer, Charles Benson. "Hurrah!" the rest of us cried and settled back to let them do the work.

Newton High School

A new organization! The "Sodalitas Latin," no, it's not a drink, but refreshments are served. We're very exclusive. No upper classmen allowed. Remember in the play when the "rooster" crowed too early and then forgot to crow at all?

Another new and exclusive club is the Boy's Science Club, presided over by Edgar Warren, that famous boy from the Centre. I don't know what they do because they wouldn't let me in but they probably blow themselves up to the fifth floor.

"Alpha Beta" older but exclusive also, is an English Club, Here we have speeches, short plays written and acted by members, and other good times.

Don't you think we are an encouraging group? Keep your eyes (both or four of 'em) on '27.

AT the very opening of the school year Newton's football hopes received a severe blow when it was announced that, owing to heart trouble, Tudor Bowen, team captain and veteran of three year's experience, would be unable to engage in strenuous athletic competition. "Ned" Dewing was the choice of the members of the 1922 team to succeed Bowen and he proved well worthy of the honor, as he was the outstanding player of the year, and Newton's only representative on the mythical all-scholastic team picked by greater Boston sporting writers.

The season started well with a duplication of the 1922 team's 13-0 victory over the powerful Quincy High eleven. September 29 saw Newton playing outside her class, and as a result a 6-12 defeat was suffered at the hands of St. John's prep. Again on the following Saturday, the team was bowled over to the tune of 7-0. Before the final whistle had blown, however, Cushing Academy, the opposing team, knew they had been in a real game and were truly thankful to emerge victors.

The Suburban League season opened rather inauspiciously on Columbus Day with a 10-0 defeat at the hands of Everett. A rather weak Cambridge Latin team was held to a scoreless tie October 20. The following Saturday came the game with Malden, when Newton showed her latent possibilities and her fighting spirit. Malden, supposedly the League's strongest team, was completely outplayed and only because of a series of breaks in her favor, escaped with nothing worse than a 3-3 tie. Somerville took Newton into camp the next week 14-13 in a rather spiritless game. Then Medford, the suburban champion, outplayed 3-0 in the first half, came back hard in the last two periods and gained a 10-3 verdict. Rindge played exceptionally good football on November 17 and as a result Newton was on the short end of a 14-7 score. The week following, in a sea of Waltham mud, the team fought, struggled, gave all that they had, and then a little more, and by scoring a touchdown and a goal in the last few minutes of play held one of the strongest teams ever produced in the Watch City to a 7-7 tie.

The Thanksgiving Day game with Brookline was for the cellar championship of the Suburban League. Completely outplayed in the first half 13-0, Newton showed her best football of the season in the last two periods, and displayed a brand which, if consistently employed, would have won her a statewide reputation. It is sufficient to say that the final score was Newton 16, Brookline 13.

In reviewing the season as a whole it may be truthfully said that, although in victories the result was dissatisfying, nevertheless the old Newton spirit was well exhibited in the "never say die" attitude of the team, and in the enthusiastic support accorded it by the whole student body right even to the final whistle of the final game.

The material was excellent and developed splendidly under the able tutelage of "Coach Dick." Only the worst kind of luck kept the boys from winning the honors they deserved. A word of congratulation to "Waxy" Littlefield, who was awarded the gold football for the best offensive playing on the team, is not out of place here, while the aggressive work of "Ham" Oakes, "Frenchy" Gilligan, and "Allah" Lovejoy also deserves recognition. Adams, Sullivan, Ryall, and Parker made a quartet of wing men which did much to worry the opposing backs. Of the backfield men, McQuiston and King, veterans of two years experience, did well, though the efforts of Holbrook and Lyons, new men, were highly commendable.

Next year Captain-Elect "Bob" Adams will have seven letter men back to help him put Newton at the top. With an opportunity to profit by the mistakes and experiences of this year the outlook for success is bright. We wish the best of luck to "Bob," Manager Phelps, and our faithful coach.

No story of the football season would be complete without some mention of the fine work of the Junior varsities. These teams, composed of younger and smaller boys, not only provide an excellent training school for future varsity material, but help to extend athletic competition to the smaller fellows without the danger of their being injured by playing with heavier and stronger boys.

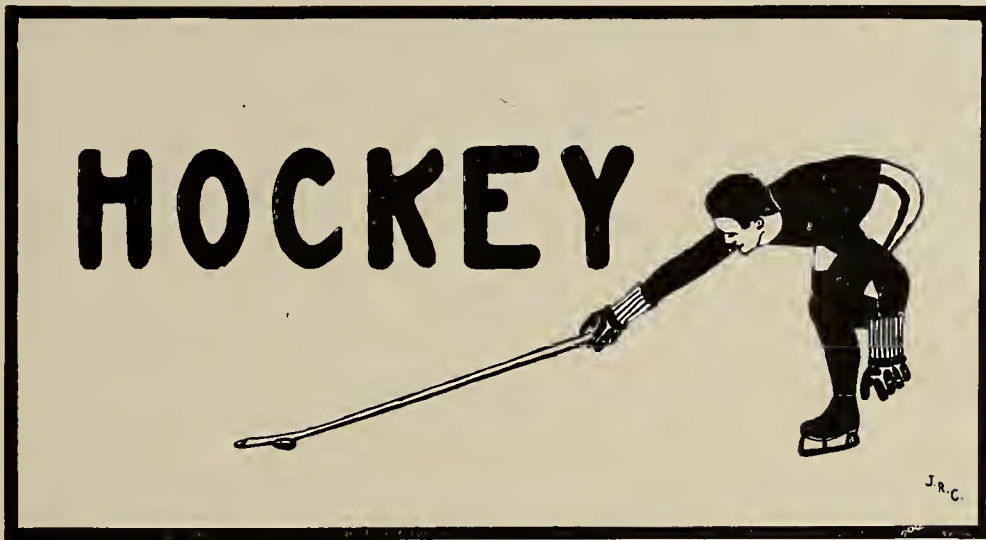

The Intermediate team under Captain "Pat" Brophy had a very successful season, and while not claiming any championship, would have given any team of its own size a hard game. The same is true of the Junior varsity under the leadership of Captain Valente.

Suburban League Champions, gaining permanent possession of the Suburban League Trophy.

International Schoolboy Hockey Champions.

Claimants, with well founded claim, of the World's Schoolboy Hockey Championship.

THE 1924 hockey season represents one of the most brilliant pages in the athletic history of Newton High School. One of the finest teams which ever represented the Garden City high school—and in view of the past history that is a strong statement to make—went through a schedule of sixteen games with only three defeats, one an early season's defeat by a prep.-school and the other two by college freshmen sextets.

The season opened at Crystal Lake on January 5, when Stone school was defeated 6-0. The first league game, played at Braeburn on January 8, saw Stoneham, a newcomer in the interscholastic league, bowled over 3-1. Boston Latin was an easy 8-1 victim on January 18, and the Harvard second team, although putting up a good fight, finally bowed to the schoolboys on January 23, 3-1. Brown and Nichols was the next victim, 3-1, and then, on January 28, came our first defeat at the hands of the very strong Harvard freshmen team, 6-2. February 2 saw Newton a little out of stride and she bowed to St. Marks in a hard fought 1-0 contest. In the second league game of the year we triumphed over Belmont 7-0 without much difficulty, and two days later Arlington was trimmed 5-2. Newton's final defeat of the season came on February 9 in New Haven. Yale freshmen, with a powerful team, needed all the breaks to squeeze out a 1-0 verdict. A hot contest at Brookline resulted in a well earned 3-1 victory over the wealthy towners. Melrose put up a great fight on February 12, but except for some marvelous goal tending was outclassed in a 2-1 victory. Then, playing her third game in three successive days and the fourth in five days, Newton defeated Milton Academy 1-0.

This ended the outdoor season and left the interscholastic league finals to be played in the Arena. On the afternoon of March 10, Newton's hockey team, playing at the peak of its form, wrested a 1-0 verdict from a fighting Brookline team after two overtime periods. Although the two succeeding games were more widely advertised and drew larger crowds, the Brookline game marked the real climax of the season, and it was here that Newton showed her best hockey of the year and defeated her strongest rival for league honors. On the evening of March 14, Stoneham was trimmed 5-3 in the Arena. By this victory Newton became Interscholastic League Champion and gained permanent possession of the cup, which had been previously won in 1918 and 1920, as well as tied for in 1921.

Conceded the championship of Eastern United States, Newton was matched with Huntingdon Academy of Quebec, champions of Canada, in an international contest. Our boys easily won 7-3, playing wonderful hockey and completely dazzling the Canadians.

Every member of the regular team played well throughout the year and it is rather difficult to pick individual stars out of an aggregation which had such fine teamwork. There were two players, however, whose hard, conscientious work and brilliant playing brought especially favorable comment throughout the year, Captain Roland O'Donnell and Guy Holbrook. Their sensational playing and fast skating and the steady, almost faultless goal tending of "Tubby" Howland were big factors in the team's victories. Henry Johnson and "Stewy" Stone both showed exceptional ability in pairing with Captain O'Donnell on the defence, while the remarkable development of the "freshmen wonder" wings, "Junie" Stubbs and Frank Spain, was as sensational as was the worth of John Nixon in the final Stoneham game.

"Doc" Martin deserves the greatest praise for his work in developing such a team, and Manager Stevens is to be commended for his constant endeavors throughout the season for the welfare of the team.

Losing only two letter men, Newton's prospects for next season are excellent.

NEWTON had a championship relay quartet this season, but lack of consistent runners in any other event weakened the team in the championship meets. With many near-champions, Newton had an exceptionally well balanced and powerful dual meet team, but as few of these meets were scheduled the group had little chance to show its power.

The season opened with the annual inter-class meet, which the Seniors won easily. January 12 saw Newton trounce the Alumni 52-25 and the next week our aggregation completely outclassed Brown and Nichols, 59½-3½.

Having thus far clearly demonstrated its great power in dual competition, the Newton team on January 25 gave its best performance of the season while going down to a 35-33 defeat at the hands of the powerful Huntington School team.

In the state meet on February 16, Newton failed to live up to expectations due to hard luck and lack of individual champions. Medford, Lowell, then Newton was the order of places in this meet. Johnson and Ellis, second and third respectively in the standing broad jump, and McQuiston, second in the "three hundred" turned in the best individual performances of the day.

In the Greater Boston Interscholastic Meet on February 23, Newton finished third to Medford and Lynn Classical.

No individual champion was produced this year, but the remarkable worth of Walter McQuiston, high point scorer on the team, and of Captain Winston Mercer, the next in the number of points scored, deserves great praise. The most pleasing feature of the season, the work of the championship relay team, is reviewed on another page. Howard Weeks, third highest point scorer, and Captain-elect Berkley Johnson were consistent stars throughout the year, as was Gordon Ellis, the elongated broad jumper. The power of the junior and intermediate divisions of the team speaks well for next year's success even though most of the this year's regulars will graduate in the spring.

NO record of the athletics of the Newton High School would be complete without a story of the brilliant achievements of the remarkably fast relay team. A glance at the records of the indoor track season will show that we did not have a single champion runner, but we did have five who could hold their own in any scholastic competition. Balance is written in every line of the chronicle of every race, of the fastest teams that ever represented the school.

On February 22, running a special relay race in connection with the American Legion Meet, Newton defeated Boston Latin and Lynn Classical. Boston Latin had the strongest quartet which has represented a Boston school for many years and our team; Ryall, Mercer, Weeks, and McQuiston set up a new schoolboy record. The next day, in the Greater Boston Interscholastic meet, the Garden City relay team defeated Medford by ten yards while turning in the fastest time of the day, and within two fifths of a second of the record for this track.

On March first in the B. A. A. schoolboy meet the Newton quartet composed of Ryall, Mercer, Cronin, and Weeks made remarkably fast time, defeating Brookline by forty yards. Andover's extremely powerful group alone was able to better Newton.

All of this fine work of the teams influenced the athletic committee to send the team to compete in the University of Pennsylvania Relay Carnival.

Newton was entered in the one mile high school Relay Championship of America, which draws teams from the largest and strongest schools in this country and Canada. Twelve teams started in this event which was won by Brooklyn Technical High, with Lakewood, Ohio, second; Medford, third; Newark Central High, fourth and Newton, fifth; while the far famed Hamilton Collegiate Institute of Canada was sixth; Waite High Toledo, seventh; and Lowell High finished eighth. That Newton was ten yards from the winner at the finish and the winning time was three minutes thirty-one and one fifth seconds gives an idea of the running of "Winnie" Mercer, "Jim" Cronin, "Howie" Weeks, and McQuiston.

THE outdoor track team has not, at the date of writing this article, competed in any meets, therefore, to make a forecast of the season is rather difficult.

Dual meets are scheduled as follows:—

- May 7. Quincy High at Quincy
- May 15. Providence Tech. at Newton
- May 22. Tufts Freshmen at Newton
- May 31. Brockton High at Brockton

On May 17, the New England Interscholastic in Worcester will be one of the objective meets. The Suburban League meet on May 29 is an innovation this year. It is to be run by the baseball-football league for the seven suburban schools and will furnish some exciting competition.

The season winds up with the State Meet in the Harvard Stadium on June 7, and if everything goes well, Newton will be well up in the fight for honors in this all-important test.

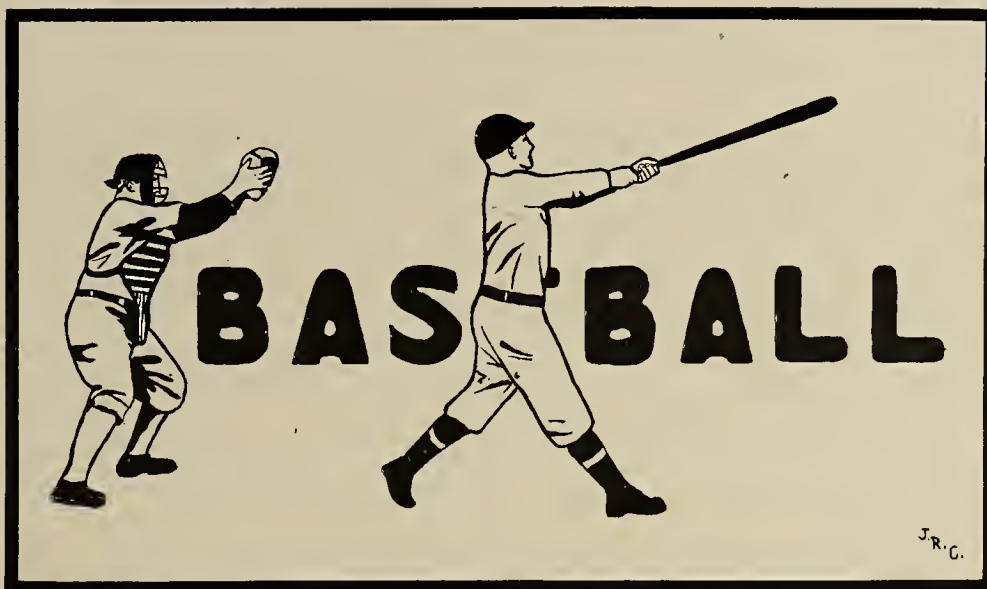

The most promising candidates for the team seem at present to be: Henrich and Thompson, high jump; Ellis, hurdle; Coniffe, shot put; Fay, javelin, half-mile; Johnson, hurdles, sprints; Cronin, half-mile; White, pole-vault; and the old standbys—Mercer, broad jump and hurdles; McQuiston, 220 and 440 yd. runs; Ryall, 220 yd. dash; and Weeks, 100 and 220 yd. dash.

BASEBALL TEAM

Dickinson (Coach)	MacPherson	Sullivan	Leary	Mahoney	Stone
McCullough	Holmes Whitmore	Gilligan	O'Donnell	Holbrook	Leonard
Considine	Howard Whitmore (Capt.)				Lawless
	Shaw				Dewing

Captain, HOWARD WHITMORE, JR.

Manager, HOWARD ALLEN

AT the date of this writing the record of the Newton baseball team is seven wins and three defeats.

In the games played Howard Whitmore has shown marvellous pitching form and the Newton nine has been almost unbeatable with him in the box. Of the other pitchers Schliepahke and Pass seem to be the most promising.

In addition to the captain, Neale Mahoney, the clever catcher, Alan Shaw, star veteran second baseman, O'Donnell and Gilligan at short stop, and "Gyp" Lawless in the outfield have shown some excellent ball playing.

The thirteen inning tussle with Everett on April 26 was a pitchers' battle all the way between Whitmore and Elmer Munroe, the Everett slabman. Newton scored the winning run on a squeeze play in the thirteenth.

The Medford game was simply a case of a very good pitcher beaten by a better pitcher. Knox pitched gilt-edged ball for Medford, but because Tommy Gilligan came through with a long single to left field, following Dewing's scratch hit and Guy Holbrook's sacrifice, one run was scored and that was the margin of victory.

The Tufts, Quincy, and Hyde Park games were all loosely-played, free hitting affairs, with second string hurlers doing most of the work for the Garden City. The Boston Latin game was lost because the infield failed to support the pitchers, and because the Boston slab artist had the Newton batters well under control during most of the nine innings.

The team suffered its first league defeat on May 7, at the hands of Brookline, 2-1, in a poorly played game.

The following Wednesday, the Orange and Black went down to inglorious defeat before the slants of "Danny" McFayden, Somerville twirling ace. The score, 6-1, and Newton's box score of one hit and seventeen strike-outs tell the story of the contest.

The team, with Sullivan pitching in masterful style, shut out Cambridge Latin, 1-0, two days later and the next day they again came through, this time with a 13-8 win over Haverhill thus avenging the football defeat of 1921.

SWIMMING TEAM

Perry	Clark	Darling	Alexander	Patterson	Robinson	Foster
Carling (Coach)	Hunter		Phelps (Capt.)	Westgate	(Mgr.)

Captain, CHARLES PHELPS

Manager, FREDERICK ROBINSON

THE season's record of five victories and four losses in dual competition may not sound very impressive, yet there lies behind these figures a story which might show that record to be not wholly unpraiseworthy.

In the first place, swimming is in its infancy in this school, this season being only the second during which a swimming team has represented the Orange and Black. As it is only a minor sport, functioning in the same season as two major sports, the task of Coach Carling has been doubly hard. In the second place the defeats were suffered at the hands of the M. I. T. Freshman, a preparatory school team, the state champions, and Gardner High, the last being played during the illness of Captain Phelps, a consistent point winner throughout the season.

"Charley" Phelps proved that he was well worth the honor bestowed upon him at the beginning of the season when he was elected captain to replace "Stan" Kimball. "Iron Man" Perry was a heavy point scorer throughout the season and featured in a second place tie in the "hundred" in the State Meet. "Red" Hunter tied for third in the plunge in the same meet and was a dependable point winner throughout the year. Clark, Alexander, Darling, and Patterson also did highly commendable service in the dual meets. Because of their work in the State Meet Perry and Hunter received major sport letters.

The season's record is as follows:

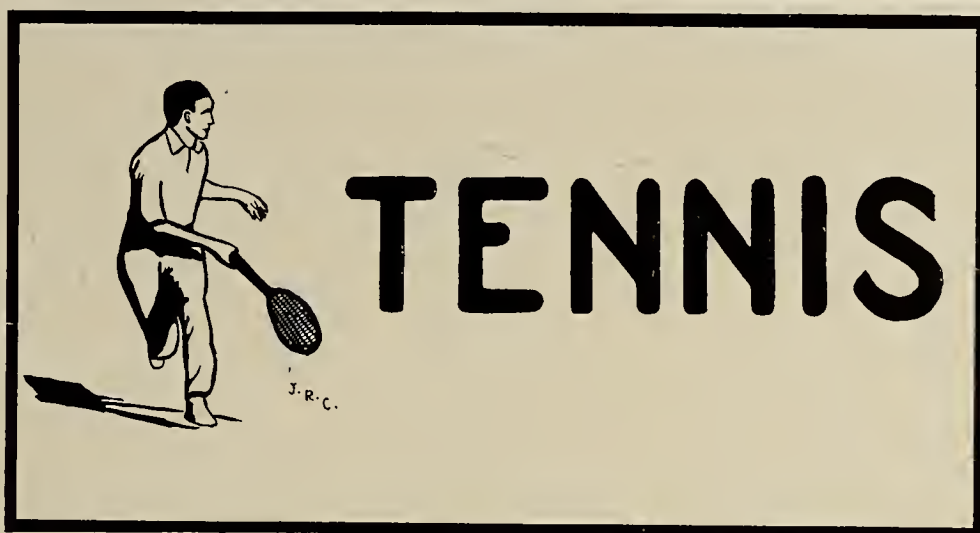

Newton 43, Boston English 10
Newton 35, Cambridge Latin 27
Newton 40, Rindge 9
Newton 16, Huntington 31
Newton 30, Cambridge Latin 20
Newton 23, M. I. T. Freshmen 27
Newton 17, Gardner High 36
Newton 45, Boston High School of Commerce 5
Newton 15, Brookline 35

Fourth Place Tie in George R. Meehan Interscholastics, 5 points.

TENNIS TEAM

Fitts	Wales	Goodman	Turner	Smith (Mgr.)
	Johnson (Capt.)		Martin

Captain, HENRY JOHNSON

Manager, ELLIOTT SMITH

THIS year Newton is very fortunate in having four of last year's veterans on her Tennis team; namely: Capt. Johnson, Turner, Martin, and Wales. Fitts and Goodman, who were the most successful in the fall tournament, are the other members.

With Johnson, who is National Junior Champion, as leader and the other experienced players, it is expected that the team will bring much honor to Newton. All but two of the members have been playing during the winter and, at the time this goes to press, are ready for the coming matches, comprising the Harvard and Yale Interscholastic tournaments as well as several preparatory and high school games, scheduled as follows:

April 19	Loomis at Windsor
April 30	Andover at Andover
May 3	Exeter at Exeter
May 7	Harvard 2nd at Waban
May 10	Worcester at Worcester
May 13	St. John's at Danvers
May 15	Latin School at Waban
May 17	Yale Interscholastics
May 19	Yale Interscholastics finals
May 21	Harvard '27 at Waban
May 26	Brookline at Waban
May 29	English High at Waban
May 30	Harvard Interscholastics
May 31	Harvard Interscholastics finals

Last year's team had the best season in many years, winning the Yale Interscholastic Championship and all other matches but that with the Harvard Freshmen. Henry Johnson and Malcolm Hill did exceptionally creditable work, being National Junior Champions in Outdoor and Indoor Singles, respectively, and together in Outdoor and Indoor Doubles.

FIELD HOCKEY TEAM

Maxim	Aubin	Hodder	Bryant	Weare	Plimpton	Howard
Holmes	Adams	McClelland	Williams (Mgr.)	McKoon

Captain, MURIEL McCLELLAND

Manager, MARGARET WILLIAMS

THE 1923 Field-Hockey season was unusually successful for both class and varsity games. More than a hundred girls reported at Cabot Field for the opening practice in September. Class teams were soon picked, and two sets of interesting games played, in which the Seniors proved to be the victors.

A varsity team was then selected by Miss Flanders, the coach, and Margaret Williams, manager, consisting of the following girls:

Darthea Bryant	C.	Muriel Howard	H. B.
Charlotte Aubin	I. F.	Katherine Holmes	H. B.
Marjorie Weare	W.	Elizabeth Retan	H. B.
Muriel McClelland	W.	Bertha Adams	F. B.
Marion Maxim	I. F.	Hope Hodder	F. B.
Elizabeth Plimpton	I. F.	Helen McKeon	G.

The first inter-scholastic game of the season was with Lasell, at Newton, in which, after some fast work, our team won a 7-0 victory. At Windsor, Newton received a trouncing, 2-11. After another week of practice Newton went to Milton Academy, and won a very exciting, close game, 4-2, worthy of mention as being the first time in the history of Newton High that a hockey team has won from this strong preparatory school. Winchester was overcome at Newton, 3-0; while between the periods, the Winchester and Newton Sophomore Teams staged a lively battle, which ended in a tie, 1-1. In the last contest of the season, that with the Alumnae, many former Newton High stars gathered and succeeded in winning from the varsity. The score was 4-3.

Great enthusiasm was displayed throughout the entire season. The work of Captain Muriel McClelland at wing, Darthea Bryant at centre, and Bertha Adams at full-back deserves especial mention.

The presentation of "N's" took place when the team went to "The Green-Bough Inn" for a final gathering.

To the 1924 team under the leadership of Elizabeth Retan, Captain, we wish success in upholding Newton's record.

NEWTON'S basketball season opened with a large representation of girls from every class. All the teams seemed to be very evenly matched until the Juniors, having several of the varsity squad, came out on top after two hard struggles with the Seniors and Sophomores. The results of these contests were the victories of 13-9 and 30-18 respectively.

In the middle of the season, the varsity team was seriously handicapped in losing its captain, Eleanor Sheridan, who was forced to resign from her position because of heart trouble. In her place, Shirley Eddy was elected by last year's players.

The varsity team, chosen from twenty-five squad-members is as follows:

DARTHEA BRYANT

MURIEL McCLELLAND

ALICE EATON

MARGARET McJENNETT

SHIRLEY EDDY

ELINOR YOUNG

MARION MAXIM

In spite of the fact that the team could boast of only one veteran player, it was fairly successful winning three out of five games played. Although Newton lost to the two fast playing teams, Windsor and Wellesley, by a margin of 48-29 and 58-21, the games with Lasell, Belmont, and the Alumnae were won with the scores 20-14, 42-19, and 24-23, respectively.

GIRLS' TENNIS TEAM

Beers		Kneeland	Trowbridge
Weare		Bolster	McClelland (Capt.)
		Rowe

Captain and Manager, MURIEL McCLELLAND

IT is rather early in the season to give any satisfactory report on the activities of the girls' tennis team. This year Newton has joined the Tennis League of Greater Boston, and the following schedule has been arranged:

Brookline

Concord

Winchester

Melrose

Lexington

The team consists of Muriel McClelland, Avis Trowbridge, Elinor Beers, Doris Rowe, Katherine Kneeland, Catherine Bolster and Marjorie Weare. This team, captained by Muriel McClelland, was chosen from the semi-finalists of last year's tournament, and several other stellar players. Newton is confident of making a good record with these girls to represent the school.

Newtonite

“THE NEWTONITE” this year, by increasing its staff and circulation to include pupils of the Technical and Vocational high schools, made a very definite step towards promoting the greater spirit of unity and comradeship for which all Newton adherents have been striving. The results have more than satisfied all those concerned. Timely editorials influential to unified thought and action by students, equal publicity given to the big social and scholastic events of the three schools, advance discussions materially aiding the financial managements of all recognized student activities, and a sporting page which carried excellent records of all current athletic news pertaining to Newton teams or students as well as impartial accounts of all inter-class and inter-school encounters all went to mould a group of pupils who are becoming less and less “Classical,” “Technical,” and “Vocational” and more and more “Newton High School.”

To aid in this cause early in May the staff sponsored a “three-school” dance which was a brilliant success. The “Gym” was the scene of the merry-making and it was crowded to capacity. This dance was the first important social event of recent years which included the pupils of all three high schools.

The organization of the editorial and business staffs was such as would conform with the same general principle of unity and co-operation. Each school had its separate staffs with editor and business manager at the heads but these divisions were centralized by being all responsible to the editor-in-chief or general business manager of the entire paper. This plan succeeded excellently and developed a competent, smooth-working group of workers due to the splendid co-operative spirit of the staff-members and the tireless efforts of the faculty supervisors.

As a special reward a few of the most conscientious were awarded gold charms at the end of the year. It is hoped that this insignia will take a definite meaning in student opinion during future years and, in time, will come to signify as much in its own way as does the coveted “N” of athletics.

THE ORANGE BOOK is a handbook issued by the Student Council for the guidance and benefit of the incoming Freshman class. It contains all the customs, traditions, privileges, and rules of the Newton Classical High School, and gives many facts that are of help or of interest to the younger students.

This year's staff, under the leadership of Alan Shaw, has drawn up plans for the book, using last year's as a basis, but making several alterations and improvements. It is a publication of which the Student Council may be justly proud.

THE English Club began with its first meeting to display snap and vim, determined to pass into the records one of the most successful years the club had ever experienced.

An illustrated lecture on "Big Game Hunting in Africa," was given in the Assembly hall by Colonel Harry K. Eustace, the famous African explorer and big game hunter. Next three plays were presented to a crowded and enthusiastic hall: the first, "The Trysting Place" by members of the club; the others, "The Finger of God" and "Suppressed Desires," by the Faculty. Much credit is due to the members of the casts for that very entertaining and successful evening. Then the club combining with the Forum gave prizes for the best Senior essays.

Many interesting speakers were secured by the club: Mr. Philip Marson of Rivers School, talked on "Modern Drama," emphasizing his subject by reading, "Spreading the News," by Lady Gregory; Mrs. George L. Parker told of the "George Eliot Country;" Mr. Charles Swain Thomas spoke on the manufacture of books and magazines and very kindly gave our school library a copy of his son's book of poems, "A Book of Verse;" and Mr. Harland D. Crowell of the Angier School addressed the club on the subject, "High School Life." The March meeting consisted of a home talent program appropriate for the month. The picnic in May ended this unusually successful year.

Throughout the year Miss Richardson, the faculty advisor was indispensable with help and suggestion,—to her the club owes much of its success this year.

“The White Blossom”

adapted from

“A Maid of Old Manhattan”

by

Helen Bonser

THE Senior Play of the class of 1924 was given in Player's Hall, West Newton on the last day of February and the first day of March. On both evenings the hall was filled to capacity and everything harmonized to make a beautiful and successful production. From the time that the curtain rose on Sachem Henrich and his tribe until it dropped to shut out the unusual sight of “Ginny” White in Walker's arms, everything ran smoothly. Much praise is due the actors and all those who helped in any way in the production.

The action of the play takes place in and near New Amsterdam at the time when Peter Stuyvesant was governor of that Dutch colony. In the prologue little Charlotte Coveney is rescued by Dutch trading gold-seekers from the Algonkin Indians. The “treasure” was the only member of the cast who was was not a member of the Senior class. The first act finds the child now grown into a young lady in the home of her foster mother, Vrouw Pelgrom. Like all persons who do not know their identity Annet, as she is known, is very anxious to establish hers. During a fire in one of the thatched houses of the village, she meets young Balthazar Stuyvesant, the eldest son of the governor, and at once a warm friendship springs up between them.

At this time there is trouble between the colonists and the Indians. Those who are causing the trouble happen to be the same tribe of Algonkins who had cared for Annet as a baby girl. For that reason, Peter Stuyvesant asks her to go to them and to attempt to dissuade them from war. While on this mission she meets Balthazar who saves her from trouble with the colonists, who think that she has turned traitor and returned to her tribe. Influenced by Annet, their beloved “white sister”, and by the sign of the falling white blossoms, the savages “go north” without a struggle.

Newton High School

About this time an English spy, disguised as a pedler, appears and offers to tell Annet about her family in return for information concerning the Dutch forts. He insinuates that she might easily learn these facts from her lover, Balthazar. She refuses, however, and later, indeed, is able to give some valuable information to the governor concerning the movements of the English. The spy is caught and the governor would have hanged him, but decides to spare his life in return for the information that he can give about the girl's parents.

From him Annet learns that she is a descendent of a very wealthy French family which has vast estates in the West Indies, and, what is more important, that her grandparents are still living. So, having established her parentage, Peter Stuyvesant is glad to welcome Annet de Marcet as a daughter, and Balthazar finally claims his "White Blossom."

THE Alpha Gamma Tau had, this year, a large list of active members who felt that the time given up to the meetings was well spent, both from the standpoint of amusement and of education. The program committee, with Herbert Hunter as chairman, has provided a wide variety of entertainments, including both members of the club and visitors, as the entertainers. Speakers from many neighboring schools and colleges have been among the latter. These visitors brought to the club's attention many interesting topics, among which was one demonstrating old methods of multiplying and another showing several unusual facts about the powers of two. This talk was illustrated by several puzzles. One speaker drew interesting constructions, causing the chalk and straight edge to perform almost impossible feats.

The crowning event of the year was the second annual play "A Mathematical Travesty" which was presented to the four classes at two assemblies early in April. This play went unusually well, and the great success of the entertainment was due to the hard work of Mr. Elicker and those in the cast.

ONE of the most popular innovations of the year proved to be the Girls' Glee Club. Originally, it was intended to have the club open to all classes, but the applications so far exceeded expectations that it was found necessary to limit membership to Seniors and Juniors. The officers chosen by the club were Dorothy Bates, President, and Eleanor Mills Secretary-Treasurer. Owing to many unavoidable postponements, the club has been unable to accomplish all that the supervisor, Mr. Griffin, had planned. However, the girls provided a most excellent program at a Wednesday morning assembly, their splendid rendering of "Doan Ye Cry Ma Honey," particularly winning appreciative applause. Later in the season, a teachers' meeting at the Junior High was entertained with selections from their repertoire.

The Boys' Glee Club was organized with great enthusiasm early in the fall, under the leadership of Mr. Griffin, whose first call brought forth many candidates. The members wisely elected as their officers, Edward Center and Howard Allen, President, and Secretary-Treasurer respectively. The club was soon combined with the Glee Club of the Vocational School, and with this added impetus enjoyed one of its most successful seasons. Although rehearsals were hampered by conflict with other activities, the members were persevering, so that they were able to make their appearance before the public on several memorable occasions, to the lasting glory of its members and the positive credit of its director.

“State O’Maine”

“DIRIGO”—I lead. Thus reads Maine’s motto. Even the rays of the rising sun tint the waters along Maine’s coast, and cast deep shadows in her valleys, before they are visible in any other part of the Union.

If Iceland sagas are to be trusted, Maine was also the first land in the New World to be discovered, for these sagas tell of the voyage of Lief Thorvaldsson, about 998, when he was driven out of his course by storms and reached a land which he called “Wineland the Good.” They tell of the colony attempted by Thorfinn Thordasson, and of the first white child—his son—born in the New World. Everyone is allowed to guess where these Norsemen may have explored, but in the sagas it is recorded that the shore was very much indented with bays and was heavily wooded. No other coast but Maine’s answers this description.

Be these trustworthy reports or merely fascinating fabrications, it is surely true that the tidal sweep of races westward reached the Gulf of Maine thirteen years before the anchor of the “Mayflower” dropped in Plymouth Harbor. And in 1616 Richard Vines, after spending the winter at Winter Harbor, Saco, returned to England with the report that the climate was not fit for a white man. There is a sort of thrill in hearing that the first fort at Pemaquid—long point—was built as a protection against pirates, principally Dixie Bull and Captain Kidd. The city of Gorgeana, now the town of York, has the honor of being the first chartered city in the country. Later, in accordance with her “Dirigo,” Maine was the first state to pass a prohibitory law.

The earlier days of Maine’s history are full of strange stories—mysterious tales with no conclusions. For instance, Mt. Desert will probably never know whether the little “Lad of Adowakeag,” born on that island, was identical with Prince Talleyrand or not. Nor will the dwellers along the Bagaduce ever know whether the man was an impostor or not who, after being taken as a prisoner to England, apparently returned, but was so strange that the townspeople doubted his identity.

These fishing towns along the coast of Maine are fascinating, even in their names: Wiscasset, Damariscotta, and Camden, for example. Thus does Howells describe one town—though it might be a typical Maine village:

“The village stood on a wide plain, and around it rose the mountains. They were green to their tops in summer, and in winter, white through their serried pines and drifting mists The river swam through the plain in long curves, and slipped away at last through an unseen pass to the southward, tracing a score of miles in its course over a space that measured but three or four Behind the black boles of the elms that swept the vista of the street with the fine gray tracery of their boughs, stood the houses, deep sunken in accumulating drifts, through which each householder kept a path cut from his doorway to the street, white and clean, as if hewn out of marble." These houses are treasure chests within: rare laces and shawls so fragile one hardly dares touch them; brocaded silks, that after a hundred and fifty years, will stand alone; jewels from the Taj-Mahal; exquisitely carved and painted ivory fans; old luster ware and pewter; and innumerable pieces of wonderful old furniture. But, could you not pass within, no one is denied the pleasure of feasting his eyes on the beautiful old doorways. Simple and almost severe, yet they seem to bid a cordial welcome to all who would raise the old brass knockers.

One can never forget the moment when one reaches the crest of the hill just before entering Camden. It is a moment of breathless beauty. On one side the Blue Hills of Camden wrapped in a purple haze, in front the village, white and green, dazzling in the sunlight, and on the other side, Penobscot Bay with its wooded rocky shores, its clear blue waters, and the occasional white sails.

But all of Maine's coast is so lovely that one could not choose the loveliest spot. There is the long ten-mile stretch of white sand at Old Orchard. There is Bald Head Cliff rising like a fortress out of the water at York. There is Casco Bay with its three hundred and sixty-five islands, all different—some barren, some wooded, some with beaches, some with white foam continually rising and falling at the foot of their cliffs or over their rocks. Here a level meadow or marshland stretches to the very shore. Here a pine tree leans far over as though to watch the movements of its graceful boughs mirrored below. Here the spray of a wave dashing over a rock sends the onlookers scurrying backward. Here the smooth water and firm white beach invite the bather. Who could make a choice among these?

Glibly we repeat the number of lakes and ponds in this one state—two thousand, two hundred and eighty one—for our minds cannot comprehend the number. These lakes, many still half-wild, are distinctive in the first place for their names. What need of putting "Maine" after such words as these—Cobbasseecotee, Umbazookus, Chemquasabamticook, Welokenebacook, Molechunpamunk, and Mooselucmeguntic?

The Rangeley and Belgrade lakes each summer draw countless tourists, eager to fish for trout and bass, while Moosehead—the land of "the grandest scenery and all the unpronounceable names in the North American Indian vocabulary—the wildest, most picturesque, and altogether the most interesting lake country to be found in these eastern states" is famed all over the country for its hunting and fishing.

Out of this lake rises Mt. Kineo.

"How beautiful the morning breaks
Upon the King of mountain lakes!
The forests, far as eye can reach
Stretch green and still from either beach,

Newton High School

And leagues away the waters gleam
Resplendent in the sunrise beam;
Yet feathery vapors circling slow
Wreathe the dark brow of Kinco."

Mt. Katahdin, regal and lofty furnished the inspiration for Longfellow's
"To a Pine Tree."

"Far upon Katahdin thou towerest, Purple-blue with distance and vast."

But Maine is a state not only of lakes, islands, and mountains but also of rivers, chief of which are the Androscoggin, Kennebec, Penobscot, and Saco. These, together with many others, furnish water power which is unrivalled in the United States. The state ranks third in developed water power, but last in proportion of development to total possibilities.

Wood products are Maine's chief manufactured output, among which paper ranks first. The other articles are small in themselves, but vast in their number and the amount of wood consumed. They are such articles as wooden toys and matches.

Despite the fact that enormous amounts of lumber are cut annually, the original supply was so great, and such care is exerted in the cutting that it is estimated that one-half Maine's forests will never be cut.

When Franklin W. Cram, "Saint Francis of Aroostook County," put through the Aroostook Railroad, he opened up, not only billions of feet of valuable lumber, but also a vast amount of fertile soil. Now Maine ranks first in yield per acre and quality of potatoes, sweet corn, and apples. In addition, as natural resources, Maine has tourmaline mines and limestone quarries, and possesses the finest slate in the country—Monson slate.

Maine's most paying industry is the summer resort industry, for about fifty million dollars are distributed annually by the tourists in the state. But this is only natural, for Maine is the "Sportman's Paradise."

"Do you know the blackened timber—
do you know that racing stream
With the raw, right angled log-jam at the end;
With the bar of sun-warmed shingles
where a man may bask and dream
To the click of short canoe-poles round the bend?
It is there that we are going with our rods and reels and traces
To a silent, smoky Indian that we know,
To a couch of new-pulled hemlock with the starlight in our faces,
For the Red Gods call us out, and we must go."

Kipling expresses the lure of Maine. But the tourist may bring not only rods and reels and traces, but the outfit for any sport that he loves, and he will find a use for it. Among the sports, fishing seems to be the most appealing. In addition to the lakes already mentioned are Sebago, Fish River Lake Country, and the Grand Lake Group, "all jewels of the first water, and in settings fashioned and executed by nature in an artistic and lavish mood." For the man who loves to take a canoe trip and fish along his way, Maine offers incomparable possibilities. One canoe trip—a part of it is in Canada—is three hundred miles long. Perhaps the most famous is the West Branch Cruise from Moosehead, covering the West Branch of the Penobscot up to Norcross.

Thanks to Maine's care in fostering her game, the hunter still finds deer, moose, and bear in large numbers. The finest road in the state is named after the country's most idolized hunter, Theodore Roosevelt.

A lover of nature could never be wearied in Maine, which is so abundant in all animal and plant life. But if the field and forest do not appeal, Maine also offers many fine hotels at beach resorts.

Recently Maine has been accepted as a winter resort also. This is the newest offering of the state to the sportsman. Skiing, skating, snowshoeing, sleighing, and tobogganing are the chief winter activities. The carnivals are the most important features of the winter's entertainments. Maine as a winter resort is still in its infancy, but it is destined to become one of the greatest centers in New England.

Passing from the beauties and resources to the inhabitants of the "Pine Tree State," we find them worthy of the favored land in which they live.

First among Maine's men-of-letters comes Longfellow, the beloved poet, of whom the State is justly proud.

Kate Douglas Wiggin made a place for herself in every New England home, at least, and was loved by all who read her "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" or "The Old Peabody Pew."

Among men-of-the-world stands most prominent, perhaps, "The Plumed Knight," James G. Blaine, and next to him Thomas B. Reed. A story which all Maine people love is told of the time when Tom Reed was Speaker of the House.

A Southern gentleman, John Wise, was shown into the Speaker's office. "Who's running this government anyway?" blustered the Virginian.

"The great and the good, John, of course, be calm—"

"Well, the great and the good must all live in Maine, then. Here, I come up here on business with the Secretary of State, Mr. Blaine, from Maine. I call to pay my respects to the acting Vice President—Mr. Frye, from Maine. I wish to consult the leader of the United States Senate—Mr. Hale, from Maine. I would talk over a tariff matter with the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee—Mr. Dingley, from Maine. There is a naval bill in the House in which I am greatly interested—Chairman Boutelle, from Maine. I wish an addition to a public building in Richmond—Chairman Milliken, from Maine. And here I am in the august presence of the great Speaker of the greatest parliamentary body in the world, Mr. Reed, from Maine!"

"Yes, John, the great, and the good, and the wise. The country is safe." And they went out, laughing, to lunch with the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. Fuller—from Maine.

The men of Maine have been, are, and always will be its greatest asset
And so, Maine,

"You're just a rugged homespun state,
Perched on the nations edge,
A stretch of woods and fields and lakes,
Of ocean-pounded ledge.
But rugged deeds and rugged men
You've nurtured for your own.
Much good the world has harvested,
From broadcast seeds you've sown.
And so we love you, rugged state,
We love your smiling skies.
We love you for your deep-piled snows,
Your jagged coast we prize,
We love you for the lofty seat
You've reared 'neath Heaven's dome.
But, best of all, we love you, Maine,
Because you're Maine—and home."

Blood

I SAW him again. I made sure today that he is the right one, for I looked for the scar—that little white scar over his right eye that Ana wrote about.

I'd know him anywhere by her description—a smiling little fat man with a straggling brown mustache and with a peculiar way of moving his jaw when he talks that furrows his fat face into hundreds of little wrinkles that chase each other round and round and seem to say, "This is a mighty cheerful fellow that we play with." You would never think to look at him that he is a murderer. But he is. He killed my boy David three months ago.

I've been here in Boston for six months, working hard to earn enough money to take Ana and David back to Iceland. While I was away, David took sick—just a little cold that he would have gotten over in a day or two—but Ana, womanlike, became frightened and called in this jolly doctor. He killed David! He said that David died of pneumonia, but it's a lie!—my boy couldn't die—he killed him—I know it. And then this murderer came to Boston, thinking that he was safe, because David was buried without any trouble. He didn't know that I was here. But I am.

I know where he lives now. I followed him yesterday. He's taking an advanced course at the Harvard Medical School, and he is living in an apartment on Huntington Avenue. It's on the third floor, and I can get in from the back by just climbing a fire escape and breaking a pane of glass. I'm going to pay him a visit some night, soon.

I've got the knife. It's the knife with which I used to carve David's meat. I'm going to carve some more meat for him with it soon. Great, rich, thick slices of red, bloody meat. Bloody—blood. Did you ever drink any blood, warm, sticky blood just issuing from a wound? I did today. I caught a cat to try out the knife. He tried to scratch me, but I fooled him! I cut off his four paws. It was funny to see him struggling on the floor trying to run on his four stumps of legs. His eyes, yellow, dark, and troubled, almost popped out of his head when I picked him up. Blood. I'm going to get some more.

It's done. I did it last night. I crept up the fire escape and got in through an open window. He didn't come in until one o'clock, and then he went right to bed. When he was all undressed, I jumped out of my hiding place and choked him. I almost choked him too hard. I was afraid for a moment that he would die too soon. He lay there with his tongue sticking out, with his face a motley purple, and with a glassy stare in his popping eyes. The wrinkles were quiet.

Newton High School

They didn't move. I hate those wrinkles. Presently he began to gasp and gasp for breath. I had him tied to the bed before he was entirely conscious. At first he thought I was a burglar, but I wasn't. The knife frightened him. He tried to scream. He opened his mouth like a fish out of water, and I could see him straining to make a deafening yell. Nothing happened. His throat had been choked too hard for that. Oh, I fooled him all right. Then I told him about David. He thought I was crazy. I'm not. He became more frightened. He wagged his jaw as a naughty pup wags his tail at the feet of his master. Those damned wrinkles drove me mad. They rushed all over his face, taunting me. Ha! Ha! Ha! He killed David—but you're afraid—afraid to kill him! Afraid? Me afraid? I swung at them with my knife. His body tightened up with a convulsive jerk. My knife bit into his face. Blood—just a little trickling stream of blood. It irritated me. It drove me mad. Why the cat had more blood than that! I struck at him again——again——and again.

The morning paper just arrived. It says—

“HORRIBLE CRIME COMMITTED”

BLOOD CRAZED MANIAC SLASHES VICTIM TO BITS

Early this morning the janitor at 2059 Huntington Avenue while cleaning the hall was surprised to see a thin streak of blood trickling under the door of Suite Five. Becoming alarmed, he called in the police, who broke in the door. A tenant, Doctor Francis T. Joselyn, was found strapped to his bed with his body literally cut to ribbons. The crime is believed to be the work of some blood crazed maniac. Doctor Joselyn was a prominent physician of Athol, Mass. He is survived by only one child, a boy of twelve years. . . .”

A boy! A boy! I didn't know he had a boy. Why didn't he tell me that he had a boy? Twelve years old. . . . David was twelve. Why there's David now. He's on the windowsill beckoning to me. Don't go away, David. Wait for me! Wait! I'm coming—coming. . . .

Down upon the street a hurriedly collected crowd gazed bewilderedly at the body of a man who seemed to have dropped from the sky. It was lying in a crumpled heap upon the hard cement sidewalk, lying in an ever increasing pool of blood.

Night

I love the Night, the quiet, deep, and still,
The calm half-sister of the boisterous Day,
For Day is yet of Time and Labor son,
While Night was born in that far time of Rest.
The feverish Day for meat and drink strives on;
But Night nor knows nor cares, but stoops to place
Her mother-fingers on our fevered brows.
She gives us of her love to make us glad,
And when at last her brother takes his place
The healing of her touch is left behind.

Impressions

A blue sky with cottony clouds hanging low.
A blue sea that changes to green in the shade;
The white gulls are sailing and sailing above
Till they come to the clouds and they turn,
Coasting with motionless wings to the sea.

A dull sky with fluffy clouds hiding the sun.
A green sea with white caps that flash and that die;
A lavender fishing boat, painted with rust,
Marked by the sea in its fury and calm
Sails to the west and is lost in the grey.

A lead sky with clouds that are crowding up close.
A black sea and spray that is dashing the rocks;
The weather worn light-house is guarding the bay,
Defying the sea and defying the sky,
Awake when the stars are asleep and are lost.

A clear sky, the clouds swept away to the west.
A bright sea with glittering sparks on the waves.
A new sloop, her sides with their shining new paint,
Is scudding before a stiff wind, with her sails
Wet by the spray—and dried by the sun.

Jass You Like It

THE other Day we were sitting quiet-like in the house eating Ham 'n' eggs when we Heard an awful Noyes coming in through the front door. My friend, who is a Ladd of lots of Carrick-ter immediately went to the front door, full of Dyer revenge for the Fellows who were disturbing him. I followed him to the front Gates where there were a Goodman y Chap(s and) man of one sort or another, jumping and Capron around and ruining the landscape. My friend asked—were they crazy. They said no—that there was a Poore, Rich woman And-er-son who were Wilder than this and me being a doctor, would I come and help cure her Fitts.

"They're either Hazen or Kidgering you," I said.

"You're too Keen," ey said.

"Don't get Wise," I retorted.

My friend said we'd join this Lawless band and help Hunter down. At first we decided we'd Rideout a ways but finally decided to Currier ourselves all the way on foot. We started down this South-West pike through a typical country village with the water of the lake Eddy ing up on her Fairbanks. The people were very cordial and kept Bowen to right and left as we went along. In spite of its being country, we saw the latest and Best Stiles in the Taylor shop windows. We went along and saw a lot of black Smiths smelting Orr in a factory. These Mills had a Tilton Tower of Pisa which we wanted to watch lean but our Stern leader, a Corken Ladd just the same, said no—Nixon that. We were in a hurry so we walked along for what seemed like Weeks or Osgood as Myles anyway.

Pretty soon we came to a Park with Greene Hills, covered with Oakes, on each side. Another covered with Cotton wood almost looked like a Whitehill. As we Saundered along the Rhodes, we saw the Martins and Partridges on the Wing and we could hear the Pigeon s c Ryan all around. Every once in a while we'd stop and eat a Berry or two. Pretty soon we saw the woman Sutton on a Sharp White Stone Lamont ing and filling the air with Wales.

We drew back a little to decide what to do and after a lot of discussion we quickly stretched a C(G) ordon around her and one of the men sneaked up and took Peakes at her. When she looked up and saw him, she was Ryalld and started to run. We Chase d her but she got away Scott-free and jumped in the lake. After another consultation we decided to rescue her and Carter d her out, but by that time she was Drown ed. We Bond her up in a Brown Butlar's jacket we found and consigned her soul to h Evans. After that, Owen to the fact that it was getting dark, we thought we'd hurry back before Knight overtook us. We questioned her son who said that she had Goddard hit once when she was in N. H. S. and had gone crazy eating Cone s and reading Bassett's Short (?) History of U. S. and that he was slowly Dewing the same thing. However, we deprived him of the book and went back to town singing the old Ballard, "The Weare ing of the Greene" and filled up on Bacon, Beer (s) and Baldwins.

AND THIS FROM PENWYPE THE SCRIBE

A chicken-chaser chased a chick,
Take it from me, he was no hick,
But he chased a chick, both young and slim
He chased a chick and she caught him.
He chased a chick,—unlucky chase
The poor young man has found his place.
And now he stays at home each night,
He does not go to dance or fight;
He must keep wifie company.
Alas! The days that used to be!
He chased a chick. He had no care.
Young man, read this and then—Beware!!!

Pupil's Name: She calls me dearie.

Name of Movie: "Asbestos."

Name of Theatre: Community.

Amount Spent: Nothing. We walked in backwards and they thought we were coming out.

Accompanied by Parents: Not my own.

Afternoon or Evening: Both,—I believe in getting my money's worth so I went early.

Miss Rich handed in a more intelligent set of answers.

Pupil's Name: Me.

Name of Movie: Artcraft Production.

Name of Theatre: Community of course. I never go with anyone who goes anywhere else.

Amount Spent: It didn't cost me a thing.

Accompanied by Parents: Yes. Daddy chaperoned us.

Afternoon or Evening: We went to the matinee but we didn't have anything else to do so we stayed for the evening performance.

PROF.: "Has anyone in the class read 'To a Field Mouse'?"
